CLEVELAND SPEAKS HIS MIND.

HE SAYS: "GIVE THE RANK AND FILE A CHANCE."

Every Democrat in the Land Will Hail With Enthusiasm a Return to the True Faith.

Philadelphia, Dec. 19.—Former President Grover Cleveland contributes to this week's issue of The Saturday Evening Post, of Philadelphia, an extended article on the plight of the Democracy and the remedy. Mr. Cleveland begins by reviewing the history of the party, and he discusses its defects since 1864 in detail. In taking up the question of the present condition of the Democracy, he says that the success of the party in 1892 was so decisive and overwhelming that a long continuance of its supremacy was anticipated. Then came "the fallacy of free silver and Populism." Mr. Cleveland proceeds as follows:

[Copyrighted, 1800, by the Curtis Publishing Company.]

"The culmination of Democratic woe was reached when its compact with these un-Democratic forces was complete and when our rank and file were summoned to do battle under banners which bore strange symbols and were held aloft in unfamiliar hands. The result of such a betrayal was foredoomed. This abandonment of the principles of true Democracy, this contemptuous disobedience of its traditions and this deliberate violation of the law of its strength and vigor, were by a degree as inexorable as those of fate followed by the inevitable punishment of stunning, staggering defeat.

"The disaster of 1872, invited by similar adventure, was quickly followed by a return to the professions and practices of sane Democracy. But the extent and persistency of our wanderings in 1896 is illustrated in a most astounding way by the command, issued on the day of our rout and discomfiture, that a second battle should be fought on the same field, with the same false war cries and the same leadership that had brought us to the surrounding gloom of defeat."

Again he says: "Thus in 1900 the lesson of 1896 was contemptuously rejected, and every hope of Democratic sucess was wilfully cast aside. Again our long-suffering rank and file, whose loyalty and obedience deserved better things, were sacrificed in a cause theirs only in name; and again it was demonstrated, but more clearly than ever before, that the only forcer that can win Democratic success are adherence to recognized Democratic principles and leadership.

"Why should we not return to these and in their name again achieve victories no less glorious and renowned than were ours in the days of courageous advocacy of our time-honored faith? Are our principles so shopworn or antiquidated as to require renovation, or their displacement by others more fashionable? There is not an honest Democrat in this broad land but that will concede these things, nor is there one who would not hail the proclamation of the old faith with that fighting enthusiasm that foretokens Democratic triumph. As new conditions arise, our principles must be applied to them, but in the creed that has guided us through a century of party existence we shall find the key to every such application; nor shall we need the lexicon of Populism to guide us in interpreting this creed."

Mr. Cleveland touches in turn on free silver and the Federal Courts, and believes that true Democrats are against condemning "the general government for protecting itself in the exercise of its function against violent obstruction within a State."

Further on he declares: "I believe no Democrat will have the hardihood to deny that we have fought our last two campaigns in alliance with un-Democratic forces, and that this alliance was immensely costly in defeat. Is there not good reason to suppose that even in success such alliance would have proved unprofitable and dangerous?"

He preaches the return of Democracy to its old faith, saying: "Sincere Democrats of every condition and in every part of the land realize that the situation of the party needs repair. Reorganization is not necessary; but a return from our wandering is absolutely essential. Let us be frank with ourselves and candidly acknowledge the futility of attempting to gain Democratic victories except in the Democratic causes and through Democratic methods. Reorganization is worse than useless and the arrogation of superior party virtue will breed only mischief. This is a time for sober thought, tolerant language and fraternal counsels. We are dealing with the condiiton of a party that cannot be destroyed by external foes; and since its ruin can be wrought only from within, it should be imperishable. Above all things, there should be a manly renunciation and avoidance of undue sectional control. Democracy will not operate efficiently on sectional lines.

"There is much for us to do; and the future is full of Democratic duty and opportunity. Our fighting forces will respond listlessly and falteringly if summoned to a third defeat in a strange cause; but if they heard the rallying call of true Democracy they will gather for battle with old time Democratic enthusiasm and courage.

"If I should attempt to epitomize what I have written by suggesting a plan for the rehabilitation and restoration of true Democracy, I should embody it in these words: 'Give the rank and file a chance.'"

One Ex-President Compliments Another.

Princeton, N. J., 18th.

Former President Cleveland was asked by a correspondent today if he had seen Mr. Harrison's speech at Ann Arbor. Mr. Cleveland replied:

"I saw a liberal synopis of it in some of the papers, and regard it as the best deliverance yet made on the subject which it discusses.

"It seems to me that those who desire to acquaint themselves with the Philippine questions involved, and what territorial expansion means to our people cannot possibly be afforded a better means of enlightenment than ex-Preeident Harrison has furnished."

Two other new offices similar to this one have been established, one in Richmond, Va., in charge of Mr. T. P. Elam, covering the eastern portion of that State, and the other in Lynchburg, Va., in charge of Mr. C. P. Sales, his territory being the western part of the State.

WEDDING AT RAMSEUR.

The Union of Miss Etta Watkins and Mr. I. F. Craven.

Correspondence of The Telegram.

Ramseur, Dec. 20.—Yesterday our popular young townsman, Mr. Isaac Fletcher Craven and Miss Etta Florence, the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Watkins were happily married. The commodious Methodist church was filled with an intelligent audience of friends and relatives to witness the plighting of their troths. The marriage service was felicitously conducted by Rev. W. F. Craven, of Sanford, a brother of the groom, assisted by Rev. T. S. Ellington, of Ramseur. Miss Ina Smitherman, of Troy, was maid of honor and Mr. E. C. Watkins best man. The bridal party entered the church to the sweet strains of Mendelshon's Wedding March, beautifully rendered by Miss Blanche Wood, of Asheboro. The ushers were: A. H. Thomas, of Ramseur, Chas. Ross, of Asheboro, J. Ed. Cole, of Ramseur, and Herbert Russell, of Franklinsville.

After the wedding dinner, the happy pair left for New York and other northern cities.

The bridal presents were of unusual beauty and magnificence.

The many friends of the bride and groom join us in wishing for them a long life of happiness and prosperity.

The Dear Things.

A large crowd of the Greensboro Female College girls were down at the depot this morning to embark on the early train for their homes to spend Christmas. There were also a mixture of Oak Ridge, Chapel Hill and Wake Forest boys on the trains, and all the fresh, fast boys, and the dear, darling girls had such a delightful time "hailing each other in passing," and making remarks about each other's hats, and blowing Christmas horns, and doing all such things as love of innocent amusement suggests to college boys [they refer to each other as "men" you know] and college girls.

No Fireworks Will be Allowed.

Chief of Police Scott says that the ordinance prohibiting the use of firecrackers and all other fireworks on the streets will be strictly enforced during the holidays. The Chief simply means what he says, and the boys who want to indulge, will have to take to their own premises.

Tomorrow Frees the Youngsters for a Season.

The City Graded Schools begin the Christmas holidays tomorrow, and will probably continue till some time about the first. Things may be expected to be a bit merry about the house now for a fortnight.

GAVE A RANSOM OF $25,000

THIS AMOUNT SAID TO HAVE BEEN PAID FOR RETURN OF CUDAHY.

The Boy, Who is Ffteen Years Old, Disappeared Tuesday Night and Mysteriously Returned This Morning.

By Wire to The Telegram.

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 20.—All of Omaha has been excited over a kidnapping which has just occurred here, followed by the return of the stolen boy, Edward Cudahy, aged 15 years, and the belief that a big reward was paid by his father for his return.

Young Cudahy left home at 8 o'clock Tuesday night to take some books to the residence of Capt. Ruskin, about two blocks distant and that was the last seen of him. As midnight arrived and he did not return the police were notified and two detectives were detained to work on the case. It was not until nearly 9 o'clock yesterday morning, however, that the matter began to assume a really serious aspect. At that hour a man on horseback rode rapidly by the Cudahy mansion and as he passed the front gate threw a letter into the yard, in substance reading:

"Mr. Cudahy: Your son is safe. We have him and will take good care of him and will return him to you in consideration of the payment of $25,000. We mean business.

"JACK."

At half past one o'clock this morning the boy was returned to his home unharmed, but badly frightened. There is much mystery surrounding the case, but it is said that the $25,000 ransom was paid.

The father of the boy said today: "My boy is home. He was kidnapped. As to how much it cost me to secure his freedom, or the manner in which it was secured, my lips are sealed at present. Later I can give the public information, but not now." The boy suddenly appeared at his father's house this morning. He was released from a hack two blocks from home, and started on a run home, apparently well when he arrived. His mother was standing at the front door with her husband, and they had evidently been apprised of the hour of his arrival.

Brown University Glee Club.

One of the social attractions of Christmas week will be the appearance of the Brown University Gee Club at the Academy of Music December 28.

These young collegians from Providence, Rhode Island, have, this year a veterans' organization. This is the third year the Club has appeared before the public without a change in its personnel. This season they have won the name of being second to none in the country. Their vocal, mandolin and guitar, and banjo selections are rendered with a precision, swing and abandon which can only be acquired by a collegian. The Club composes forty members, many of whom will be in this year's graduating class. They will make many friends here as they have elsewhere.

Alexander-Murray.

Cards are out announcing the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Alexander to Mr. James Murray, at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Rosa Alexander, about four miles east of the city, Wednesday, December 26, at 7 o'clock. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. J. McL. Seabrook.

The bride is a sister of Mr. A. G. Alexander, of this city.

Good Playing.

The company which played "When We Were Twenty-One." here last night does good work. The players all showed careful training, and some of them good talent. George Clarke is fully what is claimed for him, and Miss Estelle Carter is by all odds the most interesting woman that has appeared here this season.

Will Huffines Dead.

News comes that Will Huffines, one of the brothers, the shooting of whom near Stokesdale was told of yesterday in The Telegram, has died, and the other now is likely to die. Money, the man who lead the posse, claims that the shooting was done in self defense. He has been arrested and released on a bond of $500.

A NEW CANAL AMENDMENT.

RESERVES RIGHT TO MAKE LOWER TOLLS FOR AMERICAN SHIPS.

Offered by Senator Bard of California and Will be Called Up on Thursday—Senator Foraker Discusses the Historic Policy of the Country in Regard to the Canal.

Washington, Dec. 18.—An important amendment to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty was proposed in today's executive session by Senator Bard of California, who gave notice he would call it up on Thursday, at which time the Senate has agreed to vote on all pending amendments. Mr. Bard's amendment takes the place of a substitute for Article III, which has been stricken out by the committee, and provides: "That nothing in this treaty shall be construed to operate against the right of the United States to allow discriminating tolls on American ships carrying American goods and engaged in the coastwise trade."

Mr. Bard did not discuss his amendment beyond the mere announcement that he did not see how he could support the treaty unless an amendment of this character was agreed to. Friends of the canal who have been contending that the isthmian waterway was simply an extension of the American coast line say that in Mr. Bard's amendment there is an official declaration to that effect, for the reason that the reservation of the right to make lower tolls for American ships passing through the canal officially designates that canal as a part of the American coast. The amendment was laid before the Senate so unexpectedly that it is impossible now to predict what strength it may have.

The principal speech of the day was delivered by Senator Foraker, a member of the committee on Foreign Relations and the author of the two recent amendments reported to the Senate. Mr. Foraker had much to say in defence of Secretary Hay and of the criticism of his action. He declared that Mr. Hay was an accomplished gentleman, a scholarly man and a statesman; that however Senators might differ from the Secretary in the ultimate results as shown by the amendments to the treaty, they should remember that the Secretary dealt with conditions when the treaty was made different from those that now existed.

He emphasized the fact that the historic policy of this country had been favorable to a neutral canal and that all administrations had recognized the existence of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. That document, Mr. Foraker said, was found in the official text of numerous Government publications and was a part of the compilation of treaties now in force and issued by the Government as late as 1899. In every respect it had the sanction of official recognition.

By way of proof that the historic policy of this country had been constantly in the direction of a neutral canal Mr. Foraker quoted from the treaty between the United States and Nicaragua of 1867, in which the United States agreed to extend their protection to all trans-isthmian routes of communication; to guarantee the neutrality of the same and to employ their influence with other nations to induce them to guarantee such neutrality and protection. This treaty, Mr. Foraker said, negotiated almost twenty-five years ago, and seventeen years later than the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, indicated our policy of maintaining neutrality over any canal that might be built.

The Hay-Pauncefote treaty therefore was negotiated in accordance with what seemed to be the established policy. Mr. Foraker admitted that from the very first there had existed two contentions with respect to an isthmian canal; one, that it should be neutral and the other that it should be controlled by the United States exclusively.

So far as he himself was concerned, Mr. Foraker said that he had always favored the American policy instead of a strictly neutral canal, but he admitted that the situation had changed and asserted that the treaty, as it now stood, enabled this Government not only to manage and control but to protect and defend the canal. Under the treaty as negotiated neutrality would be guaranteed in time of peace, but in time of war the United States could protect its own interests. A true interpretation of the treaty did not prohibit the defense of the canal. The only prohibition related to the erection of permanent fortifications. Forts, Mr. Foraker said, were not essential as a means of defense, for it was folly to suppose that any nation at war with the United States would take the great risk of sending vessels through a canal 175 miles long over which its enemy had control and the power of annihilating its ships while in transit.

Mr. Foraker commented at some length on the difference between the Hay-Pauncefote treaty and the Suez Canal treaty. The latter provided that that canal should be open to the ships of war of belligerents in time of war. The omission of this proviso from the Hay-Pauncefote treaty was significant and of itself was sufficient to place an interpretation on the treaty vastly different from that which had been placed upon it by those who insisted on still more radical nmendment. The purpose of the two committee amendments was to remove any possible doubt that might be conceived with the verbiage of the convention. He could not ignore the fact that there was a doubt in the minds of some Senators, but with these amendments he was convinced that doubt could exist no longer.

is where we stand in the lumber business. At the kicking spot, as it were, in regard to prices.

First comes the owner of the timber. He just woke up to the value of it and wants double last year's prices. Then the sawmill man. He has not been making a fortune and thinks now he should share a little in the general prosperity

They say to us: "We must have so much for our trees and work." After a while it is "up to you." Don't kick. You don't suppose we have nerve enough to put up prices unless they had first been put up on us. No, indeed. But prices are NOT high. They have been to low and are just now getting reasonable. Your children will be glad to build at double the price it now costs you. It is a trite, but true saying, if you want to build, "Now is the time."

Last night Bud Wilson and another white man by the name of Curlee engaged in a quarrel which terminated in Wilson cutting Curlee about the neck and face quite severely. Blood flowed freely until the doctor dressed the wounds.

Mr. J. W. Bryan, field secretary North Carolina Sunday School Association, addressed the people of High Point last night at the Methodist Episcopal church. His talk, which was devoted to Sunday school work, was interesting to all classes as well as instructive. The association of which he is secretary meets here in March.

Our merchants are already enjoying a good Christmas trade. Never before were the different lines of holiday goods so complete and the people are beginning to appreciate this step by staying at home to make most all of their purchases instead of visiting larger towns as in former years only to find that they could have gotten the same goods in their home town.

At a recent meeting of the School Board Miss Eunice Worth, of Raleigh, daughter of State Treasurer Worth, was elected teacher of the third grade to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Miss Nettie Matton.

At services in the Presbyterian church Sunday Rev. J. W. Goodman, the pastor, tendered his resignation to accept a call to the Presbyterian church of Hillsboro, which call he has had under consideration for some time. Mr. Goodman is very popular here. He has made his congregation a good pastor and it is with regret the people hear of his going away.

Capt. T. J. Redding and daughter, of Carraway, were visitors yesterday.

Mr. John B. Martin, of Chapel Hill, spent last evening here on business.

A NEW CANAL AMENDMENT.

RESERVES RIGHT TO MAKE LOWER TOLLS FOR AMERICAN SHIPS.

Offered by Senator Bard of California and Will be Called Up on Thursday—Senator Foraker Discusses the Historic Policy of the Country in Regard to the Canal.

Washington, Dec. 18.—An important amendment to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty was proposed in today's executive session by Senator Bard of California, who gave notice he would call it up on Thursday, at which time the Senate has agreed to vote on all pending amendments. Mr. Bard's amendment takes the place of a substitute for Article III, which has been stricken out by the committee, and provides: "That nothing in this treaty shall be construed to operate against the right of the United States to allow discriminating tolls on American ships carrying American goods and engaged in the coastwise trade."

Mr. Bard did not discuss his amendment beyond the mere announcement that he did not see how he could support the treaty unless an amendment of this character was agreed to. Friends of the canal who have been contending that the isthmian waterway was simply an extension of the American coast line say that in Mr. Bard's amendment there is an official declaration to that effect, for the reason that the reservation of the right to make lower tolls for American ships passing through the canal officially designates that canal as a part of the American coast. The amendment was laid before the Senate so unexpectedly that it is impossible now to predict what strength it may have.

The principal speech of the day was delivered by Senator Foraker, a member of the committee on Foreign Relations and the author of the two recent amendments reported to the Senate. Mr. Foraker had much to say in defence of Secretary Hay and of the criticism of his action. He declared that Mr. Hay was an accomplished gentleman, a scholarly man and a statesman; that however Senators might differ from the Secretary in the ultimate results as shown by the amendments to the treaty, they should remember that the Secretary dealt with conditions when the treaty was made different from those that now existed.

He emphasized the fact that the historic policy of this country had been favorable to a neutral canal and that all administrations had recognized the existence of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. That document, Mr. Foraker said, was found in the official text of numerous Government publications and was a part of the compilation of treaties now in force and issued by the Government as late as 1899. In every respect it had the sanction of official recognition.

By way of proof that the historic policy of this country had been constantly in the direction of a neutral canal Mr. Foraker quoted from the treaty between the United States and Nicaragua of 1867, in which the United States agreed to extend their protection to all trans-isthmian routes of communication; to guarantee the neutrality of the same and to employ their influence with other nations to induce them to guarantee such neutrality and protection. This treaty, Mr. Foraker said, negotiated almost twenty-five years ago, and seventeen years later than the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, indicated our policy of maintaining neutrality over any canal that might be built.

The Hay-Pauncefote treaty therefore was negotiated in accordance with what seemed to be the established policy. Mr. Foraker admitted that from the very first there had existed two contentions with respect to an isthmian canal; one, that it should be neutral and the other that it should be controlled by the United States exclusively.

So far as he himself was concerned, Mr. Foraker said that he had always favored the American policy instead of a strictly neutral canal, but he admitted that the situation had changed and asserted that the treaty, as it now stood, enabled this Government not only to manage and control but to protect and defend the canal. Under the treaty as negotiated neutrality would be guaranteed in time of peace, but in time of war the United States could protect its own interests. A true interpretation of the treaty did not prohibit the defense of the canal. The only prohibition related to the erection of permanent fortifications. Forts, Mr. Foraker said, were not essential as a means of defense, for it was folly to suppose that any nation at war with the United States would take the great risk of sending vessels through a canal 175 miles long over which its enemy had control and the power of annihilating its ships while in transit.

Mr. Foraker commented at some length on the difference between the Hay-Pauncefote treaty and the Suez Canal treaty. The latter provided that that canal should be open to the ships of war of belligerents in time of war. The omission of this proviso from the Hay-Pauncefote treaty was significant and of itself was sufficient to place an interpretation on the treaty vastly different from that which had been placed upon it by those who insisted on still more radical nmendment. The purpose of the two committee amendments was to remove any possible doubt that might be conceived with the verbiage of the convention. He could not ignore the fact that there was a doubt in the minds of some Senators, but with these amendments he was convinced that doubt could exist no longer.

is where we stand in the lumber business. At the kicking spot, as it were, in regard to prices.

First comes the owner of the timber. He just woke up to the value of it and wants double last year's prices. Then the sawmill man. He has not been making a fortune and thinks now he should share a little in the general prosperity

They say to us: "We must have so much for our trees and work." After a while it is "up to you." Don't kick. You don't suppose we have nerve enough to put up prices unless they had first been put up on us. No, indeed. But prices are NOT high. They have been to low and are just now getting reasonable. WATCH THE BOB TAILS.

If the labor organizations of the New England States are in as bad hands as the labor papers of North Carolina the working people are being imposed upon. If a man is a total failure at anything and everything else in this State he then becomes a labor lecturer or an editor of a labor paper.—Charlotte Observer.

Back some ten years ago somebody began to talk very vigorously about the injustice being done to farmers. The jack-leg lawyers and the third-class fellows in other lines took up the farmers' cause with vigor and became mighty men and leaders in Israel. A goodly per cent. of them got office and notoriety, which they started out for. The farmers got disappointment and ridicule, and in many cases a sourness of mind which will require years to pass away.

There is now some talk brewing among and about the great industrial army that has sprung up in North Carolina that has a strange familiarity to the ear—so suggestive of that which was heard ten or more years ago among the farmers. There will be, if there is not already, a rush of the bob tails to take advantage of this movement to become mighty men in Israel. Will the history recounted above be repeated? That there shall not be such repetition, let us pray God that the people concerned may not fall into the hands of the bob tails.

But how shall this be prevented? Why, by taking the bull by the horns. Let the conservative, thinking, reasonable people take the matter up, and secure legislation that will be moderate and just to all. And we mean to say that the mill owners themselves, who as a rule come into the class of citizens spoken of in the preceding sentence, should concern themselves about securing such legislation, not about stavingit off.

MAKE ONE REALLY GOOD SCHOOL.

The Greensboro correspondent of the Raleigh Post, in his letter dated yesterday, said:

The annual meeting of the directors of the colored A. and M. College is also being held here today. A member of the board, who was a member of the last legislature, said to me: "I doubt if there is an institution in North Carolina that gets as much out of the money at its command as the A. and M. College. The affairs of the college, in President Dudley's hands, are safe, the buildings are neat and clean, well kept in every department, and when compared with other institutions, it is wonderful how they get so much out of the little money allowed them." All of which indicates wise, judicious and most careful management.

The Telegram desires to bear witness to the correctness of the above. This institution is really a great blessing to the negro race in the State, but its work is limited, and could be much extended with great benefit to the State if a different course were pursued in the policy now in effect regarding the so-called normal schools for the colored race. Instead of having two or three insignificant schools all the support should be put into this one, and double the effect would be produced.

If Charlotte hadn't been so smart she might have gotten the branch office of the superintendent of railway mail service for the third division which has just come to Greensboro. We and the postmaster general were talking of putting it in Charlotte, but we didn't like some of her ways. She needn't be disheartened though, for whatever doesn't come to Greensboro goes there and she may get something yet.

The House committee having the bill in charge yesterday decided by a vote of one, it being cast by Mr. Kluttz of this State, to report the Hopkins bill regarding the apportionment of members of Congress on the basis of the new census. This bill keeps the house at its present size, and gives North Carolina her same representation. It will probably have the effect of killing measures that are hostile to the South.

The old pilots may leave the wheel, but they never forget the passage.—Charlotte Observer.

Always with the utmost respect for the old pilots, do they not usually carry the air of "They don't do things now as they did in our day?"

The mayor of Atlanta indiscreetly stays drunk the greater part of the time breaks the laws and then pardons himself. And he could probably be elected again if he cared to take the trouble.

CENSUS AND CONGRESS.

States That Have Gained or Lost Representation by the 1900 Count.

New York Sun.

The apportionment of Congress districts on the basis of the 1870 census was made in 1873, of the 1880 census in 1883 and of the 1890 census in 1893, but this year, through the greater celerity and thoroughness of the June census, the new apportionment may be made this year, and already there has been offered in Washington a schedule of reapportionment based upon the June census and which gives the following States a gain in representation: Arkansas, 1; Colorado, 1; California, 1; Connecticut, 1; Florida, 1; Illinois, 2; Massachusetts, 1; Minnesota, 2; Missouri, 1; New Jersey, 2; New York, 3; North Dakota, 1; Pennsylvania, 2; Texas, 2; Wwshington, 1; and West Virginia, 1. By it the following States wonld lose: Kansas, 1; Louisiana, 2; Mississippi, 3; Nebraska, 1; North Carolina, 4; South Carolina, 3; Virginia, 1.

This provides for an addition of eight members of the next House of Representatives, raising the total number from 357 to 365, and though ostensibly designed to much reduce the representation of the Southern States in consequence of the adoption by them of discriminating laws as to franchises will not operate if adopted radically in that regard. Arkansas, Florida and West Virginia, three Southern States, will gain 1 member each and Texas 2, a total of 5. The States to lose include Kansas and Nebraska, neither of which is in the Southern group, and the reduced representation of the South will be, therefore, 13 votes, less the 5 which four Southern States will gain, a net loss of 8 in a total House of Representatives of 365. Under this basis of division the South would lose 8 seats, but New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey would gain 6 and California and Washington would gain 1 each, leaving the New England, Middle West, Northwest and mining States with substantially the same representation as they have at present.

The growth of the United States during the past ten years has been so uniformly general in population as in material resources that the opportunities for radical changes in Congress representation have been very few—in striking contrast to the results shown by the previous Federal census of 1890. Under the Congress apportionment which followed, Nebraska increased its representation from three to six.

REVOLUTION NORMAL.

South and Central Americans Never Pleased with Rulers.

Agitators Flourish and Often Seize the Reins of Government—Revolutions Result in Scenes of Butchery.

Revolution is a perennial institufion in Central and South America. The southern republic that does not have its uprising once a year feels that it is losing something. It is not always necessary that there should be just cause for a political upheaval, but only that some general may experience a hankering for the executive office, or that some president may wish to become a dictator.

In such cases the agitator gathers a following, issues a proclamation and seizes the reins of government, if he can. He kills as many of his enemies as he can, in the name of the republic, and holds sway until some other fellow comes along and ousts him. Or, if unsuccessful after a few skirmishes, flees the country and later is found starting a revolution in some neighboring state.

The revolutions are not joking matters, however, for those engaged in them. They mean business while they last and are usually attended with scenes of butchery and the utmost tyranny. They cause a great deal of trouble for the United States government, too, as the upstart revolutionist leaders usually think it is incumbent upon them to tread upon Uncle Sam's coat tails at some stage of the game, says the Chicago Chronicle.

Revolutions have been so frequent in Central and South America in recent years that they are looked upon by this government as a matter of course. The United States consul telegraphs the state department that a revolution has broken out. The secretary of state, with a sigh of weariness, walks over to the navy department and asks that a ship be sent to the port nearest the scene of the trouble. The navy department complies, and the senior naval officer brushes up on the instructions made and provided for such cases. He knows just what he will have to do, for if he has been long upon the station he has been through many such insurrections.

He lands a few marines and then devotes the rest of his time to seeing to it that the belligerents do not ransack the American legations and consulates and seize American merchant vessels in their search for fleeing officials. The weaker parties often make a break for protection under the folds of the American flag when affairs become critical, and it requires a great deal of watchfulness to prevent the pursuers from violating the right of asylum.

They are not always successful in this, for the victorious generals have a way of shooting their victims first and then discovering afterward that they have infringed the rights of neutrality. Profuse apologies and a salute to the American flag and damages follow. But that does not help the dead man.

It has long been a study with officials of this government what it is in the make-up of the Central and South American peoples which renders them so susceptible to the charms of the revolutionist. Of course, most of the governments are bad enough, but there are few instances where taking up arms has bettered conditions among these fiery little republics. It seems to be from a natural inborn desire to fight and to make trouble. As soon as the killing is over they dwell together again, the opposing sides, in brotherly love until the next revolt comes along, and likely as not the contending parties then swap positions and fight against the men they fought for before.

The tendency to such disturbances seems to be inherent in the blood of the Latin-American people. This is probably in part due to their excitable temperament. But men who have studied the question are inclined to think it is to a still larger degree attributable to their race history and tradition. Their governments are often republics in name only.

One difficulty with the South American peoples is that they have undertaken to erect republics upon the civil law of imperial Rome and upon monarchical traditions. They have framed superstructures in the shape of written constitutions, modeled, in many instances, after the constitution of the United States, but their political edifices have failed to withstand the stress of time because their foundations have been faulty.

The list of revolutions might be extended almost indefinitely. The history of South America consists of little else. They are all of the same general character. A so-called president attains power, perhaps by means of a more or less farcical election. He rules his country as a veritable monarch until some military rival can gather about him enough disaffected soldiers to warrant him in attempting to seize the chief executive office. Then comes the revolution. Sometimes it is successful, sometimes it is not, but it makes little difference to the people of the country who are not in the immediate following of one rival or the other.

Big Job in Reglazing.

The Crystal palace in London has been reglazed at immense cost and on a new principle, which does away with the usual wood frames and putty joints. In the new work the panes of glass are much larger in size and are held in lead frames, which are so arranged that the metal can be worked down on the glass in an absolutely water-tight joint. The cost of the work is estimated at $100,000 and is now almost complete.

Finders and Losers

BROADLY speaking, girls are divided into two great classes—the ones who find and the ones who lose.

Meta is a girl who finds. Ownerless earrings and brooches and shirt studs are scattered along her pathway, entreating her to pick them up, whichever way she strolls, and little things like horseshoes and four-leaved clovers seem to leap up in the most unlikely places at the first sound of her step.

"Guess what I found to-day?" is her regular form of greeting; so no one was surprised when the question came that day at Georgia's tea.

"Oh, I don't know," said Lilian, indifferently. "Probably a cotton handkerchief or somebody's other glove." Lilian is one of the girls who couldn't find anything if they would. Possibly that's the reason she assumes the manner of one who wouldn't if she could.

Meta gave a withering glace at the scoffer. Then she removed her Ladysmith hat and extracted from its crown a roll of money, which she spread upon her lap. A $50, a $20 and a $10 bill stared out.

"Counterfeit!" gasped Lilian.

"No, sir. Uncle Mac says they're as good as any ever made."

"You didn't find them, Meta; you're joking," protested Georgia.

"No joke about it. I was walking down Wabash avenue, and stacks of people were passing in both directions, too, but suddenly there was an open place about a yard square right in front of me, and straight in the middle of it lay this money, all rolled up. It just seemed as though the crowd parted, and everybody looked the other way on purpose to let me have it."

"Well, I never!" sung the chorus.

"What are you going to use it for, Meta?" somebody asked, but Lilian, whose interest had revived wonderfully, didn't give her time to answer.

"Use it for?" she cried. "Do you s'pose Meta would spend that money? Think of the poor woman who lost it!"

"Woman, indeed!" retorted Meta.

"Uncle Mac doesn't think that. He says there's a little pocket just inside the waistband of his trousers where he keeps a wad of bills—whenever he has one—and that it's the easiest thing in the world to slip the money in back of the pocket instead of into it. And I asked him if that ever happened to him. You ought to have seen how guilty he looked when he said: 'Once—but don't tell Ellen!' That's my aunt, you know. Well, we think—Uncle Mac and I—that some rich club fellow lost it, and that he'd put it to some extravagant use even if he had it again."

"But I can't help thinking about some poor old washerwoman who hadn't another cent in the world," murmured the blue-eyed innocent.

"Washerwomen without another cent are so likely to go strewing $80 rolls around!" said Meta.

"More likely 'twas a school-teacher with her month's salary—and teaching is such nervous work!" suggested Lilian.

"Or a fagged-out woman clerk," added Georgia.

"Well, I wouldn't take it from a woman any sooner than you would," declared Meta. "Of course I wouldn't mind so much if it belonged to a man. But I intend to advertise it, anyway."

"Certainly!" exclaimed Lilian as if she'd been thinking of that all the time. "That's the proper thing to do," and blue-eyed innocent added: "I should just use that money for advertising every day in every paper until there wasn't a cent left."

Meta pursed her lips. "Well, I'm taking Uncle Mac's advice about this," she said. "He says to study the papers a day or two and see if the loser advertises. Then, after that, he says to advertise: 'Found—Sum of money, at such a place, at such a time.' Not a word to give a false claimant any help in identifying the bills, you see. But he doesn't think I'll ever find the owner, and, say, girls, if he shouldn't turn up, what do you say to a lake trip together or some kind of a regular spree with this money?"

"I couldn't enjoy it," said the righteous Lilian.

"Not unless you gave half to a hospital," amended another.

"Oh, I don't know," dissented Georgia. "I think my conscience would take in a trip to Mackinac."

"Good for you!" replied Meta, as she rolled up her wealth and put on her hat. "We'll spend it all for gum if we want to, Georgia; and we won't treat them, either—see if we do!"

They didn't see her again for three weeks, and then she came flying into luncheon at Lilian's with a look in her eyes as if she'd just fallen heir to a million in gold.

"I've had the loveliest experience in the world!" she announced. "You remember that money I found? Well, I waited a few days, as Uncle Mac said, and no one advertised the loss; so I put one in myself. Told them to address X, the newspaper office, you know—the way they do. Next morning I went down to get the returns. There were nine answers, and of all the pathetic things! Not one of the people who wrote had lost their money on the day or at the place I found mine, but they were just as hopeful, for all that, and they actually made me feel responsible for their losses.

"First there was a man who had dropped a small, flat, black book, with a pawn ticket, a laundry bill and two two-dollar bills in it. And distressed over it! You'd think he'd lost a gold mine. And he was so sure 'twas his money I'd found—poor fellow! Then a woman poured out a whole sheetful of her heart, and drew a picture of the purse she'd lost, and told me how the money in it belonged to her sister, who was in the hospital and who needed it dreadfully, and how I'd be blessed forever if I only restored it. Next there was an old man who had dropped two $20 bills, and he went on in a shaky, feeble hand to explain that the reason he was carrying it was because he couldn't trust the banks; and then another girl, who told about an alligator-skin pocketbook containing a latchkey and a time pass over the Cincinnati, Jackson & Mackinac road. When I showed that to Uncle Mac afterward he said that road was a regular joke, because it didn't run to any of the places mentioned in its name, and he just shouted over the pass, because it had expired September 30, 1897. But it wasn't funny to me. I thought the girl must be in a sad way to be hanging on to an expired pass over a road like that for three whole years. Besides, she mentioned in a postscript that there was a five-dollar bill in her purse.

"I got awfully worked up over those letters. Then, suddenly, I had a brilliant idea. I just made up my mind to wait a week and then, if no one claimed that $80, to send for all those forlorn people and pay them what they had lost out of what I had found. I didn't dare tell Uncle Mac the scheme until the week had passed and I had really written notifying them all to be at his office at ten o'clock this morning. Then I just gave him the news all in one piece. I don't believe in breaking things, especially when you've set your heart on doing them. Oh, he thought I was crazy, of course, and wished he'd answered my 'ad.' himself and claimed the money. Said he could have done it through some one else so I would never have suspected, and then could have kept the money for me until this fit of sentimental foolishness had passed off—and all that sort of talk. But the end of it was that he took a chair over by the window in his office and let me have things all my own way with the people I had sent for. They all came, mind you, and of all the surprised-looking beings! Each one was expecting to find the identical purse he had lost, and at first everyone looked suspicious of everyone else. They couldn't seem to grasp the situation.

"I had the money, all changed into the right amounts and lying in tempting little heaps on Uncle Mac's desk. First I made a little speech and then I served gold and silver refreshments. It took every cent of the money, and I had to put in a dollar besides, so there goes our gum, Georgia; but you wouldn't grudge it if you'd been there. Such larks! I never felt so much like a beneficent fairy in my life. Oh, dear—fun! Vaudevilles are nowhere—and, say, the man who lost the pawn ticket will never get over his grudge against me because I couldn't give that back. He thinks I've lost him a fortune! But the rest were more than sweet. Girls, I've been blessed and hugged, and the old man with the two $20 gold pieces actually kissed my hand. Think of that—will you? And the woman with the sister in the hospital was so happy! And I cried. Me crying—can you see it? And Uncle Mac needn't pretend he wasn't wiping his own eyes, either! But when they were gone he squared around at me, stern as stern, and said, in a disgusted way:

"'Well, of all the girly-girly performances!'

"I looked straight back at him and just said: 'How would you have a girl, Uncle Mac, if not girly? Do you want me manny?' And honest fact, he didn't know a single thing what to say."—Chicago Daily Record.

8157—Childs' Dress with Bolero.
4, 6, 8 and 10 years.

CHILD'S DRESS WITH BOLERO, NO. 8157.

Pale, pink spotted poplin and coral velvet are here prettily combined to make a stylish little party dress.

The waist is mounted on lining body which closes in the center back.

The full front and backs are arranged at a round yoke depth, the neck being finished with a pointed bertha. Jaunty little boleros decorate the blouse fronts, and are included in the under arm eye an shoulder seams.

The short puff sleeves are completed with pointed velvet cuffs.

The skirt is gathered at the upper edge and adjusted on a narrow velvet belt. It flares gracefully around the bottom. The velvet bow and ends at the back are very effective.

This dress may be made high or low neck, with long or short sleeves, as may be preferred. Silk, cashmire, Henrietta, nun's veiling or Lansdowne are appropriate for the mode. The bolero and bertha may be made of the same fabric and edged with fancy braid if a plainer finish is desired.

To make the dress for a child, eight years will require two yards of forty-four inch material, with one yard of velvet. The pattern, No. 8157, is cut in sizes for children four, six, eight and ten years.

Christmas may never come again to you. Don't you think it will be wise to present some one with a pair of Drs. Moores' glasses and help to save their eyes, you cannot make a more useful present.

GOOD ADVICE.

The most miserable things in the world are those suffering from dyspepsia and liver complaint. More than seventy-five per cent. of the people in the United States are afflicted with these two diseases and their effects: such as sour stomach, sick headache, habitual costiveness, palpitation of the heart, heart-burn, waterbrash, gnawing and burning pains at the pit of the stomach, yellow skin, coated tongue and disagreeable taste in the mouth, coming up of food after eating, low spirits, etc. Go to your druggist and get a bottle of August Flower for 75 cents. Two doses will relieve you. Try it. Get Green's Prize Almanac.
Grissom & Fordham.

When you need a soothing and healing antiseptic application for any purpose, use the original DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, a well known cure for piles and skin diseases. It heals sores without leaving a scar. Beware of imitations. Howard Gardner.

RHEUMATISM—CATARRH—DISEASES CURED BY B. B. B.

It is the deep-seated, obstinate cases of catarrh and rheumatism that B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) cures. It matters not what other treatments, doctors, sprays, liniments, medicated air blood purifiers, have failed to do, B. B. B. always promptly reaches the real cause and roots out and drives from the bones, joints, mucuous membrane, and entire system the specific poison in the blood that causes rheumatism and catarrh. B B. B. is the only remedy strong enough to do this and cure ond so there can never be a return to the symptoms. Don't give up hope, but try B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) or 3 Bs.

For sale by druggists and Howard Gardner, in Greensboro, at $1 per large bottle, or 6 large bottles (full treatment) $5. To prove our faith in B. B. B. we will send a trial bottle free to sufferers, so they may test the remedy at our expense. Address Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga.

DeWitt's Little Early Risers are dainty little pills, but they never fail to cleanse the liver, remove obstructions and invigorate the system. Howard Gardner.

Boschee's German Syrup was introduced in the United States in 1868, and is now sold in every town and village in the civilized world. Three doses will relieve any ordinary cough. Price 75 cts.
